IMMORTALS WITH TIN WHISKERS: WEIRD DRESSES IN 'A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM.'

An immortal whose curiously-twisted moustache the Kaiser might copy.

Miss Lillah McCarthy as Helena.

Another immortal. He affects a weird beard. It would puzzle a barber to trim it.

Chic beard.

A fairy who has ringlets which look as if made of metal.

Another fairy, showing the extraordinary wigs worn.

The query crown.

The horse collar.

Bottom, which is played by Mr. Nigel Playfair.

An immortal with tin whiskers. He looks something like a human hedgehog.

Puck, which is played by Mr. Donald Calthrop.

Titania (Miss Silver).

If one William Shakespeare, of Stratford-on-Avon, had been in the audience at the Savoy Theatre last night he would probably have enjoyed the performance immensely, though had it not been for the book it is doubtful if he would have realised that it was one of his own plays—"A Midsummer Night's Dream"—that was being performed. Mr. Granville Barker and Miss Lillah McCarthy, who are responsible for the production, have garbed their characters in an extraordinary fashion, and the whiskers and beards worn look as though they were made of tin and gilded.—(Daily Mirror photographs.)

PLEADING FOR EXILED LEADERS.

Defence by Lawyer at Bar of South African Assembly.

ONLY 9 DEPORTED?

"A man of great character." That was the description of Mr. Bain, one of the deported South African labour leaders, given by counsel who appeared yesterday to plead for the exiles before the Bar of the House of Assembly.

A copy of the Bill of Indemnity for acts done while martial law was in force has been cabled to England, and, it will be noticed, it gives the number of deportees as nine, and not ten as was originally stated.

"UNJUST AND UNCONSTITUTIONAL."

CAPETOWN, Feb. 6.—In accordance with the decision of the House of Assembly yesterday to allow counsel to be heard at the Bar of the House on behalf of the deported Labour leaders, Mr. Smith, a barrister, appeared at the Bar to-day.

He quoted judicial rulings and Magna Charta in support of his plea that the deportations were unjust and unconstitutional.

Mr. Poutsma, Mr. Bain and others had used their influence in the direction of moderation, and Mr. Bain in particular was a man of great character. He appealed for justice for those men. "The scales of justice in this country," he declared, "have been tampered with, and it is for the House to see that they are not utterly broken down."—Reuter.

"ACTS DONE IN GOOD FAITH."

Mr. Harcourt, the Colonial Secretary, received by cable yesterday from Lord Gladstone the full text of the Indemnity Bill, which is described as

A Bill to provide for the withdrawal of martial law from operation in certain districts and areas of the Union; To indemnify the Government, its officers and other persons in respect of acts advised, ordered and done in good faith for the prevention and suppression of internal disorder, the maintenance of good order and public safety, and in the administration of martial law; And to declare that certain persons who have under martial law been removed from the Union shall be liable if they return thereto to be again removed therefrom as prohibited immigrants.

The schedule of the Bill contains the names of the nine deportees, which are as follow:—

Herve Jakob Pontana, born in Holland.
James Thompson Bain, Arthur Caldwell, David McKerrill, William Livingstone and Andrew Watson, born in Scotland.
Robert Burns Waterson, born in Australia.
George William Mason and William H. Morgan, born in England.

"The deportation of the Labour leaders, without trial under martial law or under the ordinary law of the country, actually carried out by decree of the Executive while a Judge held cognizance of this proposed illegal step, is certainly a very grave infringement both of constitutional law and of the respect due to civil courts," says the Law Journal. "But, so far as the South African Government is directly concerned, no doubt a local Act of Indemnity passed by the Union Parliament at the Cape will relieve them of all liability."

"But how stands it with the owners and master of the good ship Umgeni, which took the exiles on board and is carrying them on a journey to London?"

"This acceptance of the agitators on board against their will is an assault and false imprisonment; as such it is both a tort and a crime."

NEW GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

Succeed Lord Denman in Australia.

The King has been pleased to approve the appointment of Mr. Munro-Ferguson, M.P. for Leith Burghs, to be the Governor-General of Australia. This will, of course, necessitate a by-election.

TRAIN CRIME WITNESS.

Mr. White, the commercial traveller who says he saw Starchfield with his little son Willie on the day of the tragedy last January.

NEW SURPRISE IN TRAIN MURDER CASE

Another Witness Says He Saw
Father with a Boy.

"AN EARLY CLOSING DAY."

There was another dramatic surprise at the resumed hearing at Old-street Police Court yesterday of the charge of murder brought against John Starchfield, the father of the little boy who was found strangled in a North London train on Thursday afternoon, January 8.

A new witness named John Moore declared he saw Starchfield with a curly-headed boy, but his "recognition" was a qualified one, for he was unable to give the exact date. All he could say was that it was one Thursday, as it was an early closing day.

Moore is the third witness who has given evidence of this nature, the other two being Mrs. Wood and Mr. White, a commercial traveller.

Mrs. Wood, who was called yesterday, added some interesting new details to the evidence she gave at the coroner's court.

A lover of children, the pretty childish action of the little curly-headed boy in eating a cake that seemed much too big for him pleased her immensely. She smiled, and she waited for the man who was with the boy to smile also. But he did not smile.

A number of other witnesses, including the signalman who found a piece of knotted and looped cord on the rails, were called, and Starchfield, who had sat motionless in the dock, was remanded till Monday.

ANOTHER DRAMATIC 'RECOGNITION.'

Startling new evidence was called by the prosecution.

John Moore, a timber porter, of Totmers-square, Hampstead-road, said that on a Thursday recently he went to an ironmonger's shop in High-street, Camden Town, and on passing the Tube station he saw Starchfield and a little boy going towards Kensal Town-road.

Mr. Bodkin: Do you know Starchfield?—Yes. For the first time since his appearance at the police court Starchfield broke the silence which he had kept. "No, no," he muttered, shaking his head vigorously.

"Did you say anything or make any movement as if you recognised him?" Mr. Bodkin asked.

"I said, 'Hallo,' and he nodded back in recognition," replied witness shaking his head to show how Starchfield recognised him.

Did you know the little boy?—No.

What sort of little boy was he? Did you notice anything about him?—I noticed his curly hair and that he was tidily dressed.

Although witness did not specify the exact date, he swore it was on a Thursday as it was early closing day. The time he saw Starchfield and the boy was at ten minutes to two. "It was dinner-time," he added.

"FATAL THIRTEEN" AGAIN.

The finding of the cord midway between Shoreditch and Broad-street Stations was described by Signalman Joseph Rogers, who said it was looped and knotted, like a skein of wool.

Frank Gentleman, a booking clerk at Camden Town Station, said the number of half-tickets he issued on the fatal day, January 8, was thirteen. There was nothing in the ticket book to show that he issued any tickets by the 1.39 train from Chalk Farm, which left Camden Town back at 2.2. Curious evidence as to the method of cleaning carriages at Broad-street was given by George Evans, a carriage cleaner, who said that the cleaners did not have time to sweep all the compartments of trains between the time they arrived at Broad-street and the time they departed.

If a passenger were in a compartment the cleaners did not visit it.

Another cleaner, Robert Tremonger, also admitted that it was not possible to visit every carriage. Preference was given to the first-class.

Mrs. Longstaff, the landlady of the house where Mrs. Starchfield lodged, at 191, Hampstead-road, told how she sent Willie to the errand to the stationer's shop from which he never returned.

BROTHER HER ONLY CALLER.

Mr. Margetts elicited that Mrs. Starchfield did no work while at Hampstead-road, and that sometimes she stayed in all day and sometimes she went out in the evening, returning at eleven o'clock.

So far as witness knew Mrs. Starchfield's only male visitor was her brother, who called once. He was a man about thirty and had a moustache.

At counsel's request two young men at the rear of the court, both brothers of Mrs. Starchfield, stood up, and witness pointed out the one who called at her house.

Mr. Margetts: Has he shaved himself since? He is clean shaven now.

Witness: No, he was like what he is now. The brother: I shave once a week, and sometimes I am darker than others.

After describing how Willie was dressed, Mrs. Longstaff was shown the boy's soft black hat. "Do you recognise that hat?" counsel inquired, and, speaking with some emotion, the landlady said that she did.

"Just look at these things," Mr. Bodkin went on, as brown-paper wrappings were unfolded and the child's clothes were disclosed. The witness gazed at them and intimated by a nod that she identified them.

Mrs. Sarah Frances Wood, of Kensal Town, who has identified prisoner as a man she saw with a boy.

BOY WHO CHARMED PASSING WOMAN.

Train Murder Witness Describes His "Pretty Action."

MAN'S ARRESTING EYES.

in Kentish Town-road on the afternoon of January 6, now repeated her statements.

She said a tall man in front of her cleared away and left a good view of the man in the gutter, who had a little boy with him.

"I looked at the man inquiringly to know if he was going to cross the road or come on to the pavement, and I stood quite still," said the witness, "he continued to walk towards me, and I had to move out of their straight course a bit to get past me.

The boy made a pretty childish movement with his arms which he held in his hand, and which was so large that he could scarcely bite it.

"I exclaimed, 'Bless him,'" said Mrs. Wood mildly, "at the same time showing her the youngster, bent his head over the dirty ground, took a little out of it and raised it to the level of his forehead.

"I waited to see if the man smiled," added Mrs. Wood. "He did not smile."

Counsel: Did your eyes meet the man's?—His eyes met mine. He could not help but look at me, we was so close.

"I waited to see him now," Mr. Bodkin asked. "Without altering his low conversational tone.

Mrs. Wood turned with a faint smile playing upon her lips to the man in the dock. "Yes, sir, there."

Slowly her gloved hand was raised until it pointed at Starchfield.

"If I had any doubt about it I would say so," Mrs. Wood added.

"It was a strange coincidence," she continued. "On January 17 my husband and I were out when I noticed in a confectioner's shop at Camden Town some cakes like those which the boy was eating. I was not hunting for them."

UNFORGETTABLE EYES.

Answering Mr. Margetts (who defended), Mrs. Wood declared that she read nothing about the murder until January 18, although her husband read some of the details to her. She saw a photograph of the boy and his father in the Sunday newspaper, but two days before she had given a description of the man to the police.

Mr. Margetts: Upon your almost momentary glance you have identified him.

Witness (indignantly): It is not momentary. It was not more than a matter of two or three seconds.—It was more.

Upon that you profess to identify him—I do identify him.

Unreplied by any photographs?—None whatever, except that which I saw after I had seen the police. I told them he had very dark eyes and that I should never forget them. His chin was resting upon his overcoat. I did think I told the officer he had one hand in his pocket.

Mr. Margetts: That is another addition. Did you also say that you thought he was wearing a soft felt hat? Do you maintain that to-day?—I cannot be sure that it was a soft felt hat. I know he had it pulled down upon his forehead just prior to his eyebrows.

Mr. Bodkin (re-examining): Is there the slightest doubt in your mind that the prisoner is the man you saw on the boat?

"No," Mrs. Wood declared with emphasis. "If I had the slightest doubt I would say so truthfully."

WILL LORD DERBY SELL BOOTLE?

With hand over to the people of Bootle the profit which is going to be made out of the transaction.—DR. FOREST.

This was the answer which Baron de Forest telegraphed in answer to a newspaper inquiry yesterday as to what he intended to do with Lord Derby's estate should he acquire it.

Although the Earl of Derby's public offer to sell his Bootle property to Baron de Forest for £1,500,000, as reported in The Daily Mirror yesterday, has been accepted by the Baron, it is by no means certain that the sale will be effected for the figure named, at any rate.

The Bootle estate, owned by Lord Derby, includes the whole of the borough of Bootle, and is about 1,500 acres in extent. In the Land Inquiry Committee's report Baron de Forest valued Lord Derby's property there at between £3,000,000 and £4,000,000.

CHANCELLOR'S ANCESTRY.

A great Government scheme to "assist agriculture in all its branches" was foreshadowed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer yesterday, when he addressed a large deputation of members of the Farmers' Union.

The main points of the Chancellor's speech were the following:—

The Government in a very short time will submit proposals for redistributing the burden of the rates on houses and trades.

The Government propose that farmers shall have (1) full compensation for all the improvements effected by them and for all the increased value attributable to their labour, and (2) full compensation for all the improvements effected by them.

"I do know something about farming," said Mr. Lloyd George. "I came from farming stock right down from the Flood." (Laughter.)

MISS MARIE LLOYD "BARRED."

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The United States immigration authorities have carried out their threat of refusing Miss Marie Lloyd re-admission to the States from Canada.

She intends to appeal directly to Mr. Bryan, the Secretary of State, against the action of the authorities in excluding her.—Central News.

GILDED TIN BEARDS.

Novel Make-up in Mr. Granville Barker's "Midsummer Night's Dream."

There were startling innovations for Shakespeareans in Mr. Granville Barker's production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which was warmly welcomed at the Savoy Theatre last night.

The make-up of the actors who played the part of fairies was quaint in the extreme. Indeed, their whiskers were so contrived that they had all the appearance of being made of gilded tin or brass.

One of these fairy folk has a trailing beard which looks like strands of tangled macaroni, while another looks as if he were a human porcupine.

Two very interesting styles in unearthly beards are of course the pointed beard. The Kaiser would envy the fearsome curl of the enormous moustache in one case, while another Elfina beard would make a handsome drawing-room fire-screen or design for an electrolier.

As a matter of fact, most of the fairies, especially Oberon, Titania and their attendants, looked like brass figures for fender and other ornaments.

Hair like an overworked pin-cushion or like tin shavings complete the odd touches of this bizarre garb of the Unearthly Ones. Even one of the low-comed mortals wore rich purple hair.

But these odd touches are not the only features of the production. There is the enchanting beauty of the fairyland settings and novel "decorations" by Mr. Norman Wilkinson, and the melodious music and quaint folk dances by Mr. Cecil Sharp.

In Mr. Barker's production there was no "sourette" Puck or "leading lady" Oberon, as was the wont. Mr. Donald Calhoun was Puck and Mr. Dennis Neilson-Terry was Oberon.

With Puck and Oberon restored to actors there is little left in the fairy comedy for a "leading lady" to do, and so Miss Lilith McCarthy has to be content with the shadowy character of the bewildered Helena. (Photographs on page 1.)

PEER IN RAILWAY SMASH

Lord Lonsdale in Damaged Coach—Among
First to Render Assistance.

Lord Lonsdale was among the passengers in two coaches which collided yesterday with a mineral train at Kettering.

The mineral train was standing on the same line as the coaches, but owing to a dense fog was not visible to the signalman, who thought it was safe to allow the passenger coaches to pass into a siding.

Lord Lonsdale was one of the first to spring out and render assistance. He complained only of a bad shaking, but his valet was badly injured in the face.

BARRING THE CHANCELLOR.

Mr. Lloyd George was for a few minutes last night the victim of a commissionaire's zealous sense of duty.

The Chancellor had been invited as a guest to a banquet at the Hotel Metropole.

At the door of the hotel everybody had to show his ticket, and no exception was made in the case of Mr. Lloyd George, who arrived alone. Asked for his ticket, he replied, "I am afraid I have not got one."

"Sorry, sir," retorted the commissionaire, "but I am afraid you will have to send your card in to the secretary."

Just at that moment the Chancellor was recognised by rulers of the feast, who conducted him into the hotel.

BRIDE CONDUCTS WEDDING MUSIC

Boy scouts of the Althorp troop will line the pathway of the church at Great Brington, Northants, at the wedding of Lady Adeline Spencer and the Hon. Sidney Peel on February 16.

The guard of honour of the church will be formed by the Bedfordshire Yeomanry, in which Mr. Peel holds the rank of major.

Lady Adeline has been conducting the Brington Choir and Brington Choral Society during their rehearsals of the wedding music.

DUTY OF MOTHERS.

Readers Who Think Parents and Not Teachers Should Tell.

OLD BOY'S GRATITUDE.

Nothing yet has been settled definitely at Dronfield, Derbyshire, in connection with the teaching of sex hygiene to girls by Miss Outram in the council school.

The mothers, it will be remembered, took strong exception to the teaching, as also did the local school managers, but the county education committee have not as yet interfered in the matter.

In the meantime the controversy which has arisen as a result of the publicity given to the case has aroused the keenest interest all over the country.

Shoals of letters have poured into The Daily Mirror Office, and so far the vast majority have been in favour of Miss Outram's action. Yesterday, however, for the first time, opinions were more divided.

A Dronfield mother writes:—

I was rather surprised to see that a rector of a neighbouring parish should try to defend the teaching that has been given at Dronfield School. He refers to "Mother Church" giving this teaching. I challenge Mr. Powell to name anybody in connection with the Church who gives this teaching as it has been given at Dronfield to children of seven years of age. If the book in question, the "charming little stories" were read and lessons given, is of such great value in the schools, then why not the mothers of the little ones be allowed to peruse it?

AMATEURISH INTERFERENCE.

Parents do not wish their children taught sex hygiene by strangers, but would rather give the instruction themselves, says Mr. T. B. Osborne, of The School, Carlton, Notts.

He writes:—

Do your correspondents realise what would happen if the elder children of a school were "told"?

Tell them on Monday afternoon, and by Tuesday noon every child in the school would know all about the matter, and by the time the younger ones were old enough to have the lesson given the subject would be threadbare to them.

It is right that this subject should be the common knowledge and talk of little children? When shall we cease having this amateurish interference with the child? When shall we be sensible enough as a nation to regard the child and its training as if we had a child, with a child's mind and view of the world?

"I thoroughly agree with Miss Outram, and she has my greatest respect and admiration for proving so brave and noble," writes "Grateful Seventeen."

I think at the age of twelve all girls should be enlightened on the subject," she continues. "If there were only more women like Miss Outram in the world, our girls and boys would be more pure, broadminded, natural and honest."

GOOD FOR MOTHERLESS GIRL.

"Business Girl" says:—

I quite agree with "Poor Business Girl" in saying that it is a mother's duty and not one else's to inform their girls of these things they should know, when they are of an age to understand.

On the other hand, in the case of motherless girls, it would be a splendid thing for them if, on leaving school, the teacher would give them a few hints and warnings.

"I do not agree with Miss Outram, and think she has taken an unnecessary responsibility upon herself in speaking to the children of her school on such a subject. She has very plainly taken a mother's duty out of her hands without her leave," writes "A Woman Clerk." She adds:

Every mother has her own opinion on this particular subject, and will be sure to exercise her knowledge to the best advantage for the welfare of her offspring, a mother's experience being greater than Miss Outram's. It is decidedly a case of "Bachelors' wives and old maids' children."

"If any woman ever deserved the 'order of merit,' it is Miss Outram," is the opinion of "A Married Man."

He says:—

Parents have neglected their duties long enough. The crime of silence has gone on too long, and it is about time that the educational authorities woke up. I have spoken to many relieving officers and I find they estimate that one-third of the fallen girls owe their downfall to their parents.

"I am an old public schoolboy," writes Mr. H. Ragde, of Forest Hill, "and when at the age of thirteen I had for a class-mate a man with great influence, who made it his duty to explain these vital principles to his boys individually."

"I always hold this matter in the highest esteem, and I am sure his action has been deeply appreciated by many of his pupils in after life."

'FOOL ENOUGH TO CARE.'

Boy Co-Respondent in Divorce Action,
Which Ends in Wife's Favour.

The action in the Divorce Court in which a wealthy man, Mr. Charles Edward Grant Gordon, asked for a divorce from his wife, citing as co-respondent Mr. Arthur Jocelyn Luce, aged twenty, came to an end yesterday.

The Judge dismissed the husband's petition, and granted Mrs. Gordon, who had brought a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, a decree of restitution and costs. The co-respondent was dismissed the suit, with costs.

Mr. Justice Horridge said he accepted the evidence of Mrs. Gordon and Mr. Arthur Luce, who had explained away two things of which he was at one time in doubt.

Mr. Arthur J. Luce described how he met Mrs. Gordon at the Hyde last April. After he had made her acquaintance Davis, the head waiter, told him he had orders to watch her, and Mr. Luce said he told Mrs. Gordon at once.

Counsel: Have you ever called Mrs. Gordon "Jocelyn" or "darling"?

Did you ever put your arm around her, or she her arm around your neck?—Never.

Is there any truth in the statement that you were in Mrs. Gordon's room?—None.

Understand you to say that all these statements are untrue?—Yes, absolutely.

Counsel asked Mrs. Gordon questions about a letter she had written to her husband.

Counsel: Why did you write your husband: "If you love me no longer just write me a line and I will allow you to divorce me, as your family seem to wish for?"

I was very lonely and very unhappy. Then you go down to Woodville and break the windows? Mr. Luce had invited me.

In re-examination, Mr. F. E. Smith read a letter dated last year from Mr. Gordon to his wife, which contained the following extracts:—

Dear Gladys—In the course of the evening again I wish to know definitely whether you are going to have the cheek to go on with the suit you have brought.

I am, however, full of confidence that your patience is exhausted, and if you now do not stop this case quick I will inform my lawyers of the whole story, and they will have all the information and letters I have, so that they can alter the merely formal details they have put in.

You have the money you got out of both and others, in addition to the £10,000 I settled on you, and rather than give you another penny after this case I have had me, in spite of all, have done for you and put up with it. I would give you what I like.

I do not need it on myself. So far as I am concerned you have got to live on your settlement. Your conduct has been disgraceful. Why I think you are even capable of bigamy, and I ought to have divorced you years ago. I was too fool enough to care for you until the end, when you left me.

The Judge ordered the restitution order to be obeyed within fourteen days.

SUFFRAGETTES PART.

Has there been a quarrel in the suffragette camp?

The question is suggested by the announcement last night that—

The movement in the East End of London, of which Miss Sylvia Pankhurst is secretary, is known as the East London Federation of the Women's Social and Political Union, and is entirely independent of the Women's Social and Political Union.

Miss Sylvia Pankhurst said in an interview yesterday that there is no truth in the statement that her sister, Miss Christabel, wishes militancy to be dropped. "Militancy," she said, "must go on."

JUDGE AND SUPPRESSION OF NAMES

An application in which the Judge was asked to stop the reporters from mentioning the names came before Mr. Justice Astbury yesterday in the Chancery Division.

After the case had been mentioned Mr. W. R. Sheldon, who watched the application on behalf of the defendants, made his request to the Judge that it should not be reported.

Mr. Justice Astbury: I have no power to do that. The utmost I can do is to tell the reporters that I will not mention the names.

Mr. Sheldon thought his Lordship's promise complete power. In this case to give the names would be pure guess work.

Mr. Justice Astbury: I can express the hope that the reporters will not mention the names.

Mr. Sheldon: Would your Lordship say that it would not be correct for them to do so? There is nothing to limit that sort of thing. They may do so in any case.

The Judge said he was afraid he had never been a party to the suppression of anything, but he did not doubt that the reporters would have regard to what he said.

RAIN FOLLOWS SIX DAYS OF SUN

After six days of sun and gloriously fine, spring-like weather, rain fell heavily in London last night.

At noon yesterday the shade temperature was 51deg., the sun temperature 71deg. The remarkable mildness of the weather was instanced by the fact that in St. Paul's Churchyard City youth and maiden were sitting out in the open air during the luncheon hour, eating their frugal sandwiches and enjoying the warm sunshine.

The weather was expected to be moderate, but the rain was not expected to be so heavy.

NURSE'S LIFE FOR A PATIENT.

Meningitis, contracted in the course of her duties from a patient, caused the death at Derby Hospital yesterday of Miss Dorothy Jacobs, aged twenty-nine, who was sister in charge of the men's ward.

THE WEATHER.

Our special weather forecast for the week-end is:—Southern to westerly gale breeze; cloudy to drizzle with rain at times; moderate temperature.

London Observations: Holborn Circus, City, 6 p.m.: Barometer, 29.81 in. falling; shade temperature, 48deg.; wind, S. moderate breeze; weather, fine to overcast.

Sea passages will be moderate.

Beautiful spring-like weather was experienced in London yesterday, and large numbers of people were tempted out of doors. The picture shows the scene in Hyde Park.—(Daily Mirror) photograph.)

THIS MORNING'S GOSSIP

Miss Laura Cowie.

A Midsummer Night's Dream. "A Midsummer Night's Dream," tells an amusing story of her first rehearsal in the part of Anne Boleyn in Henry VIII. at His Majesty's.

That engagement was Miss Cowie's first, incidentally, and she was naturally nervous. The rehearsal proceeded to the scene in Wolsey's banquet hall. Mr. Bouchier—Henry VIII.—seated himself at the end of the table, and Sir Herbert Tree, laying his hand upon the King's knee, said: "That is where you will sit."

"Miss Cowie—Mr. Bouchier."

Miss Cowie, blushing violently, perched herself upon the extreme edge of Mr. Bouchier's lap. Sir Herbert meanwhile strolled away to discuss other matters. Presently he returned and noticed the young actress's confusion—and remembered.

"Ah, I forgot," he said, "You don't know one another; allow me to introduce you; Miss Cowie—Mr. Bouchier."

The Boer Generals and the Tailor.

"I like General Botha and General Smuts, and I like De Wet," said my tailor to me yesterday. "When they came over to England after the war I was given a day in which to make them all evening-dress clothes. They had never worn evening clothes before, and were like boys wearing their first 'Etons.' They would not be interviewed by the newspapers, so I got a well-known journalist to act as my assistant when the trying on business was in progress. That's how the papers got their views about things."

The Dixie's Age.

A correspondent writes to ask me the exact age of the Dixie Kid. All I can say is that after his contest with Blake the Kid told me he was just over thirty. A French book of reference says the same.

His Deal.

A traveller of vast worldly experience laid it down to me recently as an axiom that all men who play cards cheat. He instanced a game of poker as played in Nevada. An Englishman, a greenhorn, suddenly stopped the game, saying:

"I object. That man dealt himself five aces from his sleeve."

"Well, it was his deal, wasn't it?" replied his next door man, "what are you objecting to?"

Left £500,000 to the Queen.

Half a million is a welcome legacy even to a monarch. Mr. Ronald Blunt in his pleasant volume, "In Cheyne Walk and Round About," recalls the story of the eccentric Mr. Neild, of Chelsea, who left a fortune of £500,000 to Queen Victoria in 1852.

Mr. Blunt was curious enough to go to Somerset House to see this unusual will. "It is written on half a sheet of foolscap in Neild's clear, firm hand," and concludes, "I pray her Majesty to be most graciously pleased to accept the same."

Her First Rehearsal.

Miss Laura Cowie, "Hermia" of last night's production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," tells an amusing story of her first rehearsal in the part of Anne Boleyn in Henry VIII. at His Majesty's.

A Memorial Window.

After some investigation, the Queen did accept the fortune. But she increased Neild's legacies of £100 to each of his executors to £1,000, secured an annuity for an old servant and erected a memorial window to her benefactor in Marston Church, Somerset.

King Leopold's Congratulations.

The King of the Belgians' letter of congratulation upon her good fortune, written to Queen Victoria, is interesting.

"My dearest Victoria," he wrote, "that Mr. Neild should have left that great fortune to you delighted me. Such things only still happen in England, where there exists loyalty and strong affection for royalty, a feeling unfortunately much diminished on the Continent." Mr. Blunt comments: "His Majesty, it will be observed, speaks feelingly."

Heads and Hearts.

Your desperate lover is always either comically tragic or tragically comic. There is a wealthy young American in town just now, and he has fallen violently in love with Miss Lily Lena. The other day he wrote to her threatening to blow his brains out, and Miss Lena wired the following reply:—"Sorry you have lost your heart, but please keep your head."

A Battle of Shops Coming.

A friend in the commercial world tells me of a great fight that will be starting soon between two of the biggest department stores in London. Each is about to build huge premises on the outskirts of London, from which to organise a big "shopping by post" campaign on the lines so popular in the United States, and each firm is determined to outdo the other in advertising its attractions.

"Ruined Ducks."

A gentleman, the other day, was advised by his gardener to buy some "ruined ducks" for the garden. He was unable to think why ruin should make the ducks more valuable for the garden. Going further into the matter, he discovered that the man was doing his best to say "Rouen."

Gaby's Monkey.

The terrible news has been brought to me that Gaby Deslys's little monkey is dead. I am grieved. She used to carry it about in a powder puff, and remember one occasion when Gaby was talking fiercely about the Bishops the monkey was so overcome by her eloquence that it fell in her rouge pot and very nearly stifled itself with rouge.

A Power Behind the Scenes.

I saw Mr. Christopher Taylor yesterday looking quite like his old self again after a long and serious illness. When I first saw him he was pointed out to me in the Constitutional Club as the man "who is the City." All the various Conservative leagues which have found their birth in the City owe much to Mr. Taylor's powers of invention and construction. He is one of the most astute party wire-pullers.

Solemn Mr. Hewart.

Mr. Gordon Hewart, K.C., who has just successfully prosecuted George Ball for the "sack murder," and who is to second the Address on the opening of Parliament, started life as a serious journalist. He is built somewhat on the lines of Lord Haldane, and looks almost as solemn. His personality and the highest of all political gifts, the gift of making the obvious appear to be the profound, should carry him to the parliamentary heights.

Looking for Talent.

There are not many good stories about "Parsifal," but the following seems to me rather amusing. A well-known music-hall agent was present on Monday night with his manager. "If you see anything or anybody in the show that might go into a revue—make a note of it," he said.

In the West End at Last.

One of the most unaffected actresses on the English stage is Miss Edith Goodall. Her success in "Within the Law" at the Haymarket Theatre has, of course, given her a great West End reputation, but for years she had to be content with provincial work before her appearance at the Court Theatre in "Hindle Wakes" made London managers realise the kind of talent that was in the market. How many other actresses are languishing in the provinces to-day whose talent would well repay a West End engagement?

Coolness and Crime.

One thing must have highly amused the legal fraternity about the "sack murder" case. The prisoner was cool and collected, and the prosecution instanced this as evidence of guilt. The demeanour of a prisoner is always cited as evidence of guilt by prosecuting counsel in murder cases. If the prisoner is cool, then he must be callous; if he is nervous and unstrung, then he must be suffering from a guilty conscience. It is all part of the legal game.

Sir George's Rescue.

Strollers in the Row the other day were spectators of an exciting little scene, in which Sir George Alexander and a small dog were the chief characters.

Sir George was seen to dive suddenly under the rails and dash for the middle of the tan, where the small dog was gambolling happily, but recklessly, in imminent danger of horses' hoofs. After a short, sharp pursuit, the gallant actor-manager returned—a little dishevelled—bearing the struggling dog to its anxious mistress.

An Egyptian "Blue."

Mr. Hegazi will be the most interesting person playing in the Varsity Soccer match at Queen's Club to-day. He is an Egyptian, and the first of that nationality, I believe, to get a Blue. He is a forward and a very fine shot, and Cambridge are looking to him more than anyone else to win the match for them. Hegazi plays in very light soft kid boots, without toe-caps, which give him a remarkable control of the ball: he gets the "feel" of it.

Should Girls Be Told?

A new baby arrived, and the father told his ten-year-old little daughter what the doctor had found in the garden. The little girl seemed very delighted, and asked if she might write to her brother at school and tell him the delightful news. When the father saw her letter this was what he read:—"Dear Bobby,—You owe me 3d.—it's a girl!"

Not in the Programme.

The proposed dog show for pets of the members of the cast of "The Girl Who Didn't" is still being eagerly discussed. Miss Grace La Rue's little Japanese Yo-San is responsible for the inception of this scheme. She is immensely proud of it, and is willing to back it against all comers. Yo-San is fond of its mistress, too; it followed her on to the stage from her dressing-room one night.

A Compliment!

It was during the present run of "Peter Pan." In the wings one night a very minor member of the company stopped Mr. Godfrey Tearle and, murmuring an apology, said: "You'll excuse my saying so, sir, but I consider of all the Captain Hooks we've had, in my opinion you're quite the best."

Tearle was rather pleased. "It's very good of you," he said. "What makes you think it?" The answer surprised him. "Well, you see," said the minor person, "you play seven minutes quicker than anyone else, and that seven minutes just catches me the last train."

Colour.

I saw a dainty pair of gloves this week of a bright brick-red, and sets of pyjamas for women of cerise silk trimmed with a vivid blue, and a Chinese yellow shade with blue collar and cuffs. THE RAMBLER.

Sir George Alexander.

Mr. H. Hegazi.

Miss Edith Goodall.

BLIND CRICKETERS.

Boy Batsmen Who Judge by Sound Where to Hit—Folded Arm Catches.

Playing cricket by ear is an achievement of which few could boast.

Yet the blind pupils of Swiss Cottage Blind School can play an excellent game by sound.

With a wicket ball, in which is contained a bell, the bowler prepares to attack the wicket.

When The Daily Mirror visited the school yesterday the boys were practising their game.

"Play!" shouted the bowler, and in reply came the batsman's "Right-ho." On hearing this word the bowler knew in which direction to send the ball. His fast underhand went straight for the wicket and the batsman, judging by the tinkling bell, knew when to hit.

"I know exactly how far to run," he told The Daily Mirror afterwards, "because there is a mat at the bowler's end which I feel with my bat."

"The fielders," said the headmaster of the school, "have the most difficult part to play. But if the ball touches their chests the batsmen may as well consider himself out; for immediately a fielder feels the touch of the ball his arms fold round it with amazing rapidity."

A batsman has to 'feel' middle instead of taking middle, as the ordinary player does. (Photographs on page 9.)

TROUSERS FOR WOMEN.

The Fair Sex Will Now Have the Privilege of "Wearing the Breeches."

Trousers for women!

This is the latest garb worn by the cricking women who like to be considered pioneers of fashion.

The trousers are an evolution, and not the product of a sudden "brain storm" in the Rue de la Paix. When a cleft fishlike tail was added to the sheath skirt the idea of trousers occurred to the modistes.

The Turkish skirt—an emulation of the Turkish trousers—followed, and by easy stages came the trousers of to-day—veritable trousers, and not "colourable imitations."

They are made of tweeds and serges—masculine tweeds and serges, too—and are much more than divided skirts. They are, it is true, not wholly and frankly masculine yet, because they are cut much fuller than men's trousers.

"Yes," a Mayfair modiste said yesterday, "you can get trousers in the shops now. They are very wide and haven't wholly lost their 'skitty' appearance, but I am convinced that they will shrink in width from month to month."

"SUMNER'S" SONG AFTER SENTENCE

George Ball ("Sumner") is unlikely, it is stated, to appeal.

He appears indifferent to his fate, and was heard singing in his cell after the death sentence.

Elhoff, it is expected, will appeal.

£100 CANARIES.

"Fried" Birds Popular at Crystal Palace Show—A Grasshopper Warbler.

"Scarecrow" canaries—dishevelled-looking birds with feathers ruffled, in all directions—were easily the most novel entries at the annual Cage-Bird Show, which opened at the Crystal Palace yesterday.

Five of these quaint-looking birds (they are technically called "fried" canaries) were shown by Mr. A. E. Brooks, of Cambridge. Although they looked worthless they were valued at £70.

"Fried" canaries have suddenly become very popular, one of the judges told The Daily Mirror. "Despite their disreputable appearance they are rather difficult birds to rear."

Several of the canaries and other birds on show at the Crystal Palace yesterday were valued at £100. Mr. F. G. Bole was showing four £100 canaries.

The oldest bird in the show, which was winning prizes for twenty years past, was a Meyer's parrot, owned by the Rev. G. H. Raynor. This veteran obtained a first prize yesterday.

For the first time an English grasshopper warbler—a tiny bird that runs along the ground like a mouse—was exhibited.

Alleged suffragette outrages at dog shows made the officials at the Crystal Palace yesterday very watchful.

A teaspoonful of poisoned birdseed and a £100 canary falls dead!" said an anxious official.

TOMMY ATKINS AS EDITOR

Entertaining Monthly Journal Which Is Produced Entirely by Soldiers.

Tommy Atkins can turn his hand with a will to most things that come along in his very varied existence, but it may be news to most people that he is a competent, practical, working journalist.

But he is, and he turns out a particularly bright and thoroughly up-to-date little paper, called the "Army Service Corps Journal."

It is run in particular by the Army Service Corps, that remarkable regiment which supplies transports, bakeries, butchers' shops, builders—in fact, it covers every known trade.

The journal appears once a month and circulates in every corner of the globe where there is a soldier to be found.

The editor's job is emphatically no sinecure, for his office is inundated each day with matter from both home and foreign stations, including short stories and poetic effusions. And, like the editor of The Times, he gets shoals of letters of complaint from both officers and men.

The advertising and commercial side of the journal is also run by the soldiers, Sergeant-Major Keene being the head of these departments. He goes out himself to obtain the advertisements, and with excellent results.

The staff of the paper amounts to exactly a dozen. The compositors, who, with the foreman, number five, also print the journal.

The journal, which is sold for twopenny, gives plenty of scope to sporting matters.

ROYAL HAIR SPECIALIST'S INVITATION TO THE GREY-HAIRED.

A Free Personal Test of the Great "Astol" Discovery, which Restores the Lost Colour to Grey, White and Faded Hair without Dyes or Stains.

The above invitation is issued to-day to every reader whose hair is either growing grey or has already lost its colour.

You are invited to test free of cost a new discovery which restores the hair's lost colour even after years of greyness.

"Astol" is the result of years of research by Mr. Edwards, the famous Court Hair Specialist, whose "Harlene" and "Hair-Drill" are growing millions of beautiful heads of hair all over the world.

"Astol" has already enabled thousands of ladies and gentlemen to look from ten to fifteen years younger by restoring the lost colour to their grey and faded hair.

And you can now prove its value for yourself. You have only to apply for it, enclosing 2d. in stamps to pay return postage, and using "Astol" is to develop in the grey hairs a colour that exactly matches that part of the hair which has not gone grey.

When the greyness is total, the restored colour is just the same colour as the hair possessed before it became grey.

Further, "Astol" cures all forms of greyness, whether the loss of colour is due to worry, nervous strain, illness, a sudden shock, or advancing years.

This is what "Astol" does, and this is what you can now prove for yourself at Mr. Edwards' expense. No wonder that the discovery of "Astol" has been hailed by all who have investigated its merits as the most remarkable Toilet Secret of the Century.

ACCEPT THIS FREE INVITATION TO-DAY.

Why suffer the handicap of premature age which follows greyness? Accept to-day's offer of a Free Trial of "Astol."

Send off the coupon below, enclosing 2d. stamps for postage, and by return you will receive:—

(1) A bottle of "Astol," the natural hair-colour restorer discovered by Mr. Edwards, which has given back youth to the appearance of thousands of hitherto grey-haired men and women.

(2) "Good news for the grey-haired," a remarkable little treatise giving the history of Mr. Edwards' research for a greyness cure, and showing how "Astol" fulfils all essentials. In addition to giving a number of valuable hair facts, the booklet gives directions how to use "Astol" with the greatest possible success.

Just as plants could never put forth green foliage but for the nourishment drawn by their roots from the soil, so the hair turns grey unless supplied with colour from the pigment cells of the hair roots. A few drops of "Astol" applied to grey hair in the morning will awaken these pigment cells, and cause them to re-supply the hair with its natural colour. You are invited to put the colour-restoring powers of this discovery to a personal test to-day without incurring the slightest cost, as the accompanying article shows.

a trial supply of "Astol" will be mailed you entirely Free and without obligation.

"ASTOL" MAKES YOU LOOK YEARS YOUNGER.

To be grey-haired is to look older than you really are. Search the world over and you will find very few men and women, if any, who are pleased at being thought older than they are. Mr. Edwards' great new discovery enables you to retain or regain your youthful appearance. For at the least suspicion of approaching greyness just use the invitation printed above. It will bring you everything you need for preventing your hair becoming grey. Even, however, if you are grey-haired already, this outfit will still enable you to regain your youthful looks. "Astol" restores the lost colour to grey and faded hair in precisely the same shade and depth that characterised it in days gone by.

"Astol," remember, is not a dye. It possesses none of the characteristics of a dye. It will not colour your hair any hue you like—it just brings out the hair's natural colour whatever that colour may be. It acts upon the colouring processes of the hair. It causes the hair to renew its own colour. You have the opportunity of putting this to the proof to-day—free of cost.

A most important point is that "Astol" does not give to the hair eccentric tints such as magenta, mauve, etc.

CURES LONG-STANDING CASES OF GREYNES.

So remarkable is "Astol" that it even cures cases of greyness of 20 or 30 years' standing as surely as it restores the colour to hair that has just gone grey.

When the greyness is partial, the effect of

The Trial Outfit will be sent you in a plain wrapper, and you place yourself under no obligation whatever in accepting it. All Mr. Edwards asks is that you use it exactly as directed. The result will convince you of the value of consistent application.

Only those who have used dyes in their efforts to hide greyness know how futile and disheartening a task it is. The most successful operation remains obvious, the hair assuming a dull, metallic look. And, further, it is impossible to completely paint the hair from root to tip, as a consequence of which dyed hair all too frequently has a variegated or mottled appearance.

"Astol" does not act from the outside, but replenishes the flagged energies of the depleted colour cells of the hair roots, causing them to pour up colour of exactly the same hue as it was before the hair became grey.

And a pleasing feature about "Astol" is that when once your hair is restored to its original colour, an occasional application only is necessary to maintain it.

All chemists and stores supply "Astol" in 2s. 9d. and 4s. 6d. bottles, or you can obtain it direct, post free. Foreign postage extra. Cheques and P.O.'s should be crossed.

FREE--To the GREY-HAIRED

EDWARDS' HARLENE CO.,

STATUES OF LIBERTY.

FOR some months past, the attention of writers with a gift for seizing upon obvious points and making the worst of them, has been directed to "those United States," the Statue of Liberty and the case of Miss Marie Lloyd: and indeed it was not to be expected that this contrast should be resisted. A composer of Imaginary Dialogues might make much, had he sense of character, and a gift of abstract argument, of a discussion, or altercation, between the excluded and harassed singer and the colossal statue that freely from the harbour of New York.

But, after all, what would his sarcasm prove?

Merely, that some American authorities share with most average persons a faculty of conceiving themselves other than they are, a possibly subconscious gift for acting in one way and believing in another.

This gift, this habit, this faculty—whatever you like to call it—is not new, not what American. Indeed, as Americans will hate to hear, it is largely an English habit. The English, perhaps a little more than other races, have the skill to reconcile action and belief by never letting them meet. They run parallel, however far prolonged—preaching and practice; opinion and habit; what we advise or enforce upon others, what we follow and do ourselves. And so we, of all people, when we find a race preaching liberty in sculptured symbols, and interfering with other people's habits in determined meddlesomeness, have merely to turn round upon ourselves, and the human race in general, and ask, penitentially, in what matters we are illustrating similar contradictions in ourselves.

What do we conceive ourselves to be, in contrast to what we are?

We conceive ourselves to be what we talk about, take pride in, show, as surface, to the world which runs its own deep flood beneath the surfaces. That is the meaning of Statues. When you see Liberty with her arm raised, it doesn't mean that she exists. It means we have in our brains an image of her which we can realise in stone, but not in flesh and blood. That is the meaning, too, of Churches and Parliaments—places where we register our convictions that certain Ideals are to be pronounced good. We pronounce Ideals and follow Reals. The word is spoken, "Love one another." The action runs parallel—burn one another, cut one another's heads off, in order to force one another to love one another, as the writings tell us we must. "Be free, be my brother," says the word. Your head must be chopped off, runs the parallel action, because you will not be my brother and free in the manner meant by the law. "Come to the land where men are unhindered," says the invitation. "Go out of the land where we like people to pretend to be better than they are," says the welcome. These parallels of common talk and act are simply the everlasting lines of life as mortals always live it.

And now, as to that question whether action and talk, however far prolonged, will ever meet: we leave it to geometers, moralists, students of Euclidean ethics, and dreamers about Utopia, Erewhon, the Ideal Republic, Atlantis, the City of the Sun.

A THOUGHT FOR TO-DAY.

The shortest way to do many things, is to do only one thing at once.—Montaigne.

THROUGH "THE MIRROR."

THEATRES NEW AND OLD.

"W. M." writes that in our new theatre "we want to be able to see; that's all!" May I add that we also want to be able to breathe?

Do theatre owners and managers ever give a thought to the number of people who have given up theatregoing simply because such pleasure entails a severe headache? We know that pleasure has to be paid for, but it is hardly fair on the part of these theatre owners and managers to make us thus pay twice over. Publicans do not go so far. Their patrons at least are not obliged to accept a headache with a bottle of whisky.

And why is it that in all the new theatres the upper circle folk have been skayed to a height above that of the gallery in the old theatres? Think of the upper circle (now the pit) in the Haymarket. It is for seeing and hearing as good

DESPERATE REMEDY.

AS a bachelor, now and for ever, I would advise "Disquieted" to give up his ideas of marriage and settle down as a happy and comfortable single man. He will then be able to develop his ambitions and prove such an asset to the nation as the married man in his misery can never hope to be.

"A DREADFUL DILEMMA."

EVERYONE will sympathise with "Anxious Wife" over the dreadful mistake she made about her husband's trousers. How awfully sweet it was of her to let all the world know—except her husband!

I have never had any trouble myself in that way. My suit to be worn for each particular day is always brushed and pressed ready for me each

BIG GAME HUNTING AS INSPIRED BY THE CINEMATOGRAF.

Cinematograph operators are beginning to disguise themselves as wild animals for the purpose of serving as decoys to the real beasts. This idea might be taken up by the big-game hunter, with the inexpensive variations here shown. The animals would surely be taken in.—(By Mr. W. K. Haseiden.)

as the dress circle in the new theatres, while their upper circles are infinitely worse than any gallery in an old theatre. No wonder people are turning to cinemas. The ventilation in these is better, not worse, than in the theatres, and there is no need to strain one's eyes to see or one's ears to hear.

OUR READERS' OPINIONS.

Emigration Discussed as a Permanent Solution of the Overcrowding Problem.

YOUR Colonial readers—an ever-growing multitude, as I judge from letters I receive from cousins of my own in Canada—will no doubt be greatly interested in your letters about emigration when The Daily Mirror reaches them. What a pity they cannot cable over replies to the discussion at once!

Personally I judge it to be quite true that some day the problem of overcrowding will arise in Canada and in other Colonies as it has arisen here. But surely that day is yet far off. There is room yet for millions and millions in this world of ours, and if only wealth were better distributed and a wiser land system introduced this talk about overcrowding would have no point.

E. J. L.
Pembroke-crescent, W.

IF "An English Canadian" will read my letter again, he will see that he has misinterpreted my statement about the comparative prospects of the worker in England and in Canada.

I stated that "if a man cannot get work in England, he will find it hard to get it in Canada." "An English Canadian" quotes this as reading "he will not get it in Canada."

No one who has not been to Canada and witnessed for himself the hopes and struggles of the emigrant to that vast country can possibly realise how important and far-reaching the emigration question has become. England cannot afford at this stage of her history to lose the best of her manhood.

I believe a large proportion of your readers will agree that, if a solution exists to this question, it is to be found in the paradox—"Emigrate at home." If intending emigrants would only put the spirit, the grit, and, above all, the adaptability, which are all demanded of them when they reach Canada, into their search for work here, they would not long remain out of work. When a man loses his job as a bricklayer in this country he will tramp the streets for weeks searching for a bricklayer's job. Yet the same man will probably go to Canada and make a living as a plumber. "Go to Canada prepared to take anything," say those who push the emigrant up the gangway of the "Maryannic."

Why not stay at home and show the same spirit?

DON'T EMIGRATE.

IT is not only the unemployed and out-of-work that are so heavy a drag on our civilisation. It is the under-employed also.

I mean those dragging out wretchedness, unhealthy lives on bare subsistence wages—necessarily unable, on such wages, to bring up their children in a healthy manner.

For such as these emigration is no use. They could not hope to succeed under the conditions of the strong and healthy work of the new world. May we not quote the words of our Lord in reference to many of these and say that it were better they had never been born?

It is no good denying that a problem exists when it clearly faces all people alive to-day who are not hypocrites, conscious or unconscious of it. Our central problem is the one of reconciling numbers to the means provided for the support of them. Until this is faced and solved all our talk will be talk merely. I am very glad that you are discussing the subject.
Anlaby-road, Teddington.

IN MY GARDEN.

FEB. 6.—The beautiful ranunculi may now be planted during dry weather. Few flowers produce such a brilliant effect in the garden. Set the tubers in well-dug and light soil about 3in. apart.

They must be planted ("claws" downwards) 2in. deep and be surrounded with a little sand. After planting it is best to place some light material over the soil to protect the roots until the young foliage appears. During dry weather give them plenty of water.

Galliotia candida (the snow-white summer hyacinth) can also be planted now. It is a grand flower for August.

PEOPLE seem to think that marriage changes men utterly.

Why should it?
The selfish, pleasure-seeking single man will be the selfish husband. Marriage changes women, but men it leaves the same.

The fortunate possessors of these animals receive large sums for allowing their pets to pose for advertisements, with the result that they are photographed oftener than musical comedy actresses. The posters advertising various articles, which are reproduced, are of American origin.

Side Whiskers for Women.

Are women going to revive the fashion of "mutton chop" whiskers in another form? The picture shows Mile. Jocelyne, the well-known French actress, wearing a tuft of hair on the cheek which, at first sight, suggests whiskers. Her evening robe is of white satin.—(Reutlinger.)

O! What a lovely Garden!

A garden of glorious blossom, foliage and fragrance, a garden with an abundant array of healthy flowers and plants—that is the kind of garden you get when you sow Ryders Penny Packet Seeds. You can make your garden a complete success by sowing these world-famous seeds, and you will need no expert knowledge or elaborate fertilisation, because Ryders Seeds have such splendid germinating power and are so healthy and prolific.

Your only expense will be the price of the seeds, which cost a penny a packet for any variety "from Mustard and Cress to Orchids." Sow them this year and you will have a better garden than ever you had before.

Ryders PENNY PACKET Seeds

Why Ryders Seeds Succeed. Ryders Seeds are cause they are farmed in the most careful manner from the healthiest and best strains in the world, and get the benefit of the expert knowledge which Ryders have gained in half a century of seed farming. The result is that Ryders Seed Crops are the world's finest—splendid in germinating power and exceedingly prolific. Many public gardens and institutions owe much of their floral beauty to Ryders Seeds. Ryders are the best seeds for amateur and professional alike; for by following the simple cultural instructions on each packet magnificent flowers, plants or vegetables are ensured. Sow Ryders Seeds this year and you will be sure of success.

Penny a Packet—Why? Ryders Seeds are sold in penny packets for the convenience of the public. You can pay a shilling a packet for seeds if you like, and will probably get more seeds, but you positively cannot get better seeds than are contained in a packet of Ryders.

Because Ryders Seeds are sold in penny packets you are able to get a wide range of different varieties for a small sum. For instance, five shillings will stock a small garden with 60 varieties.

The highest-grade strains from "Mustard and Cress to Orchids" at a penny a packet. That's the Ryder policy, and a good one you'll admit.

A FREE Catalogue for YOU.

A TOWN GIRL'S 'COUNTRY' BEDROOM

It Suggests Sunshine and Flowers, Though Outlook Is Over Chimney-pots.

THE 'COTTAGE' EFFECT.

How often we fail in the furnishing of bedrooms, which ought, above all others, to be airy, comfortable and—an oft-forgotten need—cheerful!

Just at present, for instance, there is a great vogue for grey in bedrooms.

Grey! Imagine the effect of a grey and purple room in the sad light of a November morning, when the courage of the most courageous is at an ebb!

Give me rather my little country bedroom, up three flights of stairs though it may be. With an outlook over the chimney-pots, it yet contrives to remind its happy occupant of the sunshine and flowers of life!

And the means by which this was accomplished were so simple!

IVORY AND DARK BROWN.

The walls, to begin with, were distempered a warm ivory, the woodwork painted so dark a brown as to be almost black. The boards that show beyond the square of moss-green carpet are treated the same way.

In front of the fireplace is a creamy sheepskin. I had it by me, or I should have made a wool rug. The fender is high and brass, the tiles are cream, and on the tray stands a shining little copper kettle. There is asbestos in the stove instead of wood, but the reflections on a winter's night are just as cheery and much more quickly obtained.

Laid on the real mantelpiece and securely fixed is a much longer wooden shelf, painted like the other woodwork and owning a bevelled edge. A similar shelf makes a wide window-ledge.

On the mantel-shelf the quaint brass candlesticks, funny china shepherds and shepherdesses that only pretend to be old, but yet are delightfully contrived and "cottagey." There is a blue ginger-jar also that invariably bonnets a "posy."

On one side of the fireplace stands an ancient rocking-chair with chintz cushions. A small table with a workbasket and a rack of my very favourite books are at the side.

PICTURES TELL OF SPRING.

The bed is an ordinary small wooden affair, but it has a cover of rose-pink casement cloth that reaches far enough down to do away with a valance, and an over-cover of frilled creamy muslin always looks fresh and dainty.

The dressing-table has shelves fixed for boots and shoes, and holds also a hatbox, the whole hidden beneath its pink casement cloth petticoat and frilly muslin skirt. An old-fashioned glass stands upon it. There are not many pictures on the walls, but those that are there are all of sunny spring and summer out-of-doors, framed in dark oak.

The washstand tries to be as unobtrusive as possible in a distant corner, although its pretty plain cream china is far from an unpleasing sight, or its muslin splasher and embroidered towels either.

BOWLS OF HYACINTHS.

On the wide window-ledge I always have a pot or two of something flowering. Just now it isn't pots, but bowls—blue bowls filled with pink and white hyacinths.

Little straight white muslin curtains hang just to the window-ledge, but are kept well pulled back, and the whole window is framed by chintz curtains (also short) and a "cottage" valance on top. This chintz, which also covers the cushions of the rocking-chair, and the little flat cushions of my other two chairs, has an ivory groundwork, with fat little pink rosebuds all over it.

My country bedroom always smells contrived as well as looking it. This because the woodwork gets a weekly polish with lavender wax, and because (when the gas stove is alight) the bowl of water that keeps the atmosphere from getting too dry has always a few drops of oil of lavender floating upon it.

OUR CHILDREN'S SATURDAY CORNER.

Laughter-Loving Pig to Try Your Water-Colours or Crayons on This Week.

My dear Girls and Boys—Goodness only knows what the pig in the picture is laughing at, but it is good to see a creature so utterly enjoying himself so heartily. Let us hope he will be careful not to topple backwards off his chair.

Colour him with water-colours or chalks, and send the finished picture, with your name, age and address, to the Children's Corner, The Daily Mirror, 23, Boulevard-street, London, E.C., not later than the first post on Wednesday next.

Four prizes are offered for the best attempts—5s., 3s., and two of 2s. 6d. each—and a number of certificates of merit will be awarded.

The parrot who lived in Peru and was not satisfied with the colour of her feathers would have been more than content if only she could have seen the beautiful colour some of you have painted her. First prize, 5s., is won by Cuckoo Smallpiece, 124 years, Manor House, Felsted, Essex. Second prize, 3s., is carried off by a very young competitor, Beryl Paston Brown, aged only four years ten months, 23, Spencer-road, West Wimbledon. Heartily congratulations to Beryl on her cleverness. Third and fourth prizes, 2s. 6d. each, go to Sylvia Kage, Great Glen Manor, Leicester, and Perle Loxton, 27, White Ladies-road, Clifton, Bristol.

Good-bye until next week. AUNT MARY.

Four prizes and a number of certificates are offered for colouring this picture.

MOTOR TEST PROGRESS.

Girls Start Driving Lessons Next Week, After Good Work on Mechanism.

To-day the three girls who hope to show that women can become efficient motor-car drivers as quickly as men finish the first week of their training for the Royal Automobile Club's certificate.

"We are all looking forward to the driving lessons, which begin next week," they told The Daily Mirror yesterday in the interval of a practical lesson on motor-car clutches at the Motor Schools training garage at St. John's Wood.

"We all like the work of learning very much so far. The practical lessons on the mechanism of a motor-car engine are particularly interesting, and we do hope we are making good progress."

It has been suggested that the theoretical part of their instruction presents more difficulties to women than does the practical.

As to that, the eldest of the three girls said that they all liked the system of their instructors in first giving a lecture on a certain part of a car and afterwards a practical demonstration.

"Things seem to be made clearer to one by means of the preliminary lecture than they would be if we were taught straight away from the car," she said. "The most difficult work we have had to do so far is tyre-changing."

Mr. Turner, the manager of the institute's training school, said the women were making very good progress, although he would not make any comparison between their rate of advance and the men's.

"They have got as far as practical lessons in ignition and wiring up," he said, "and I think they will be sufficiently advanced on the mechanical side to start driving lessons about Wednesday next."

OUR WEEKLY TOILET TALK

Why Neglect the Eyebrows When It Is So Easy to Enhance Their Beauty?

Why do most women not take greater care of their eyebrows?

Until unsightly bald spots appear many seem to think they are indestructible, and others are content with unevenly growing ones. Yet the delicately arched and perfectly smooth eyebrow is a feature of great charm.

Every woman can spare a minute in the morning to brush the eyebrows—from the nose onwards always—with a small soft brush. This stimulates them, removes dust that hinders their growth, and keeps them smooth and in place.

If the hair is scant or beginning to fall, a lotion recommended by "The Daily Mirror Beauty Book" will be found an excellent restorative. It should be rubbed in with the tip of a finger every night—care being taken to stroke outwardly. The lotion is composed of oil of neroli, ten drops; tincture of cantharides, one drachm; and almond oil, two ounces.

A POINT FOR HOUSEWIVES.

"Modern woman has been relieved of the necessity of manufacturing her clothes, of weaving and of creating the food supply. She has much leisure.

"To see that the people who fulfil the duties that used to be hers—factory and laundry girls and others—are properly fed and do not work too long or under adverse conditions ought to be a large part of her duties."—Mrs. Bass, president of Chicago's Woman's Club.

RED SPOTS ON FACE BURNED VERY BADLY

Intense Pain. Spread Until Covered Side of Face. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Took Away Burning and Itching. Trouble Cured.

Station Rd., Cullompton, Devon, Eng.—"Five years I had suffered intense pain from little red spots on the right side of the face. It started at first with just one solitary spot until at last it spread until it nearly covered one side of my face. It itched and burned so much that I would have given anything to get rid of it. When I scratched it the more inflamed it became. Occasionally these spots would break and discharge matter which only made it worse and caused it to spread more. I used various ointments and creams which only did it more harm than good. After this I was persuaded to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment, which I took heed of. For two weeks only I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment three times a day. I bathed the affected parts with warm water and then washed them with Cuticura Soap and then applied the Cuticura Ointment, which gave immediate relief, taking all the burning and itching feeling away. The Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me. (Signed) Miss Denner, Feb. 13, 1913.

BEYNON V. LEDOUX.

Return Encounter to the Great Battle of December 27 Won by the Frenchman.

The return match between Charles Ledoux (France) and Bill Beynon (Ireland) for the bantam-weight championship of Europe took place at Cardiff to-night. It will be remembered that the first ended in the Welshman's defeat. He retired at the end of the seventh round with a damaged eye.

Beynon is a typical Welsh boxer, and has many notable victories to his credit. He has boxed Digger Stanley twice in the National, the first contest ending in victory, and the second in defeat. Two other matches which stand out in his record are those with Johnny Hughes at the Adelphi Club and the Canterbury Music Hall last winter.

Both these bouts were terrific battles, the last one being particularly so, for Beynon received a severe blow over the left eye, which, it is said, has never healed properly since. It was a terrific right punch that opened his eye that caused him to retire in his first match with the Frenchman.

Ledoux, who is only twenty-one years of age, has had a remarkable career, and in the course of over sixty contests has only lost eight, one of these being to Paul Gil, who was easily beaten by Kid Lewis last Monday.

The Frenchman won sixteen of his first seventeen contests by the knockout, only one extending over four rounds. Then came a meeting with Carpenter in Paris in 1909, and the referee's decision went against him. In the following year Bill Ladbrough caused him to retire in the fourth round, but in a return contest Ledoux had his revenge, forcing the Greenwich lad to retire also in the fourth round.

Johnny Hughes was disqualified in the second round against Ledoux in 1910, but a year later the verdict was reversed, the Englishman winning on points after ten rounds. After Ledoux's victory over Beynon, Hughes challenged him, and Mr. Jack Callaghan offered a purse of £500 for a contest between the two men at Premierland on January 26, but the challenge was not accepted. Ledoux first came into prominence in this country by defeating Joe Bowker on points at the National Sporting Club. He was subsequently matched with Digger Stanley, also at headquarters, for the bantam-weight championship of Europe. Stanley won on points, but the Frenchman was dissatisfied, and he was given another match at Dieppe, where he knocked out the Englishman in the seventh round. That was in June, 1912, and Ledoux has held the title ever since.

In America last summer he was beaten by Eddie Campi in twenty rounds, and Kid Williams in sixteen rounds, but returning to Paris he beat Bud Smith and Leprieux, both of whom were knocked out. Then came his match with Bill Beynon at Cardiff two days after Christmas. Beynon had said the worst of this contest until he was partly blinded and his hands twice a towel in the ring.

Millwall have signed on J. W. Williams, the Crystal Palace forward, who had been with the latter club for four and a half seasons.

What Every Woman Forgets

playful. They had been strained with the eagerness of a woman kept waiting over-long.

"One moment!" she added. "Let's have some light on the subject."

She turned, retired a few paces and switched on a light in the lounge-hall, central, its shade old-rose coloured. Mr. Slew did not been asked to do so, but he stepped into the hall.

She came back to him. She was in a gown of black, low at the throat, the only splash of colour the red rose tucked in at the bosom. Her wonderful figure was almost as distinctly suggested as it appeared on the film, when she stood on the diving-board. Her face was pale, and her reddipped mouth—a little too red to be natural—was rather wide. Her large eyes were dark.

Slew stroked his moustache gently. Figure had been very distinct in the film, and features were more distinct on the enlargements made for him by Fenimore. But flesh and colouring and the play of expression had been absent.

"I must apologise!" she murmured. "Men don't understand domestic worries, but I'm without servants—left at a moment's notice."

There was a lurch in her voice. Mr. Slew recognised the fact, in an impersonal way. Mrs. Slew was never jealous.

Slew looked as if he was exceedingly sorry for Mrs. Morland's domestic dilemma.

"But what—" she added, looking at him inquiringly, and then absentmindedly—so it seemed—adjusted the rose set in the bosom of her low-cut gown.

Slew appeared oblivious.

"I must apologise, I oughtn't to have called so late. I'm house-hunting. And I—er—understand that you wished to let this bungalow furnished—that you were leaving."

"Leaving. Let the bungalow furnished? Who on earth—"

But it took a great deal to fluster Mr. Slew.

"This is The Nest, isn't it?"

He had noticed that The Nest was the name of one of the bungalows passed.

"No, no," smiled the woman. "You've come past The Nest. This is The Nook."

Judge Says Absent Man and Convent Authorities Have Committed Contempt.

That a man who had failed to attend the court with a child whom he had been ordered to produce was guilty of gross contempt was asserted yesterday by Mr. Justice Astbury.

Mr. Bitchoff, who appeared for the absent man—Mr. John Speranza, who has a flat in Kensington—said that apparently he was still in Brussels.

The Judge: He is in gross contempt. It is nothing whatever to do with the relations between the father and mother. I shall deal with him very severely. The facts are as bad as they can be.

Mr. F. H. A. Bell, Mr. Speranza's solicitor, was then called by the Judge, who said:

I made an order last week upon the authorities of the Convent of the Sacred Heart, at Beaumont, to give the mother of the child access to her and to prevent the child's removal from the convent. Your client was shown a copy of that order by Sister Benedict last Wednesday evening, and he then arranged with her that this child should be removed to Brussels. I have a letter written by your client stating he is arranging for the child to be taken into a Brussels convent.

Mr. Bell said a letter he had read from Mr. Speranza mentioned incidentally that he was unfit to travel, as he had an attack of appendicitis.

The Judge said the convent authorities at Beaumont were also in contempt, and he took a bad view of the whole matter. He ordered that the child should be brought to the court at 3.30 p.m. on Monday.

PROSPECTS OF TO-DAY'S LEAGUE FOOTBALL.

Dress Rehearsal for the Villa and Albion—Rovers at Derby.

MANCHESTER UNITED IN TOWN.

After the excitement of last Saturday's Cup-ties to-day's matches in the League will be more quietly interesting. Still, some of the games are important to the clubs fighting for League championships, and may furnish a line for the football tips.

Such a one is the meeting of Aston Villa and West Bromwich Albion at Villa Park, for these famous Brummagem clubs are due to meet in the same area in a quarter-final of the Cup. The game at the Villa will be a big pull over the Villa; last season they won there by 2-0, and it is possible that the B'ams will repeat the club from Belstaff Distillery may figure in the forward line in place of Bentley.

As their Cup-tie at Exeter last Saturday, but all are reported sound. It should be a great match, but I rather fancy the chances of the Villa.

Blackburn Rovers, the leaders and present favourites for the Cup, will play the rather heavy-headed Derby County, and with their best side in the field Blackburn should win comfortably. Derby seem to me to be a team that will probably never get a chance to play in the first division, and in the winter have had a lot to do with their 2-0-out and probably the absence of the clubs in the danger zone, and cannot afford to drop points to their champions, so that to-day's battle should be a very hot one.

Sunderland, who have not yet quite risen to the height they attained last season, but who are still good enough to be second on the League table, will visit Sheffield to play the United. They will be without their star forward, Buchan, who has got married during the season.

Manchester United visit Tottenham, who will make several changes in their team. Clay and Cartwright will replace Collins and Webster at back, and Walter returns to inside right, and Weir to right half, but Bliss, who got crossed against Derby last Saturday, will give way to Banks, the Durham boy, who improves with every match.

Manchester, who will probably play a chance of championship honours. With the Spurs one of the teams fighting to avoid relegation, this is a game that will be of great importance to both sides. The result of last year's draw was not surprising.

Similar match, in view of the result of the Cup-tie, is that at Newcastle, where the United, who are only third from the bottom, entertain Bolton Wanderers, who are fourth on the League table. Bolton, who were last season never dropped a point to Bolton at Newcastle, who will have Cooper for Douglas.

Derby County, who are fifth on the League table, will play the United, who are only third from the bottom, entertain Bolton Wanderers, who are fourth on the League table. Bolton, who were last season never dropped a point to Bolton at Newcastle, who will have Cooper for Douglas.

SOUTHERN LEAGUE PROSPECTS.

By far the most important game in the Southern League this afternoon is the match between Swindon and the Crystal Palace at Swindon. At one time it appeared that Swindon would have the championship side long before the end of the season, but they have been injured, badly, and have dropped so many points during the last two months that the Palace are now one of the favourites.

It is hoped that both Fleming and Kay will be fit to try out in this match, and that the Palace will be able to win twice against Bolton, who will play at inside left. The Palace have not yet definitely settled on their team, but they are expected to be a strong side, and will be a great game, with Swindon probably winners by a narrow margin.

Millwall, who have been in the League record lately, are at home to Norwich, and as the match has been set apart for the benefit of Jeffrey and Vincent there will be a big crowd at New Cross. The League record lately has been improving, and doubtless two points will be added this afternoon.

Reading, a side still well in the running for the championship, visit the first division, and are in danger of losing their place in the first division, they can look forward to a hard game. Reading won last season by 2-0, and it is hoped that they will be a great game, with Brighton possibly winners by a narrow margin.

Fresh from their Cup victory over Clapton Orient, Brighton should be in good form to-day. The match at Clapton Orient, another of the Southern "hopes," will be too good for Southend, even though Mitchell is to be given a rest.

West Ham, with a full team, should get a couple of points at the expense of Tottenham. Tottenham, even on their own ground, may find Gillingham too good for them, and their matches may be won by Cardiff, Exeter and Middlesbrough.

WALSLEY AND SCOTLAND.

Second Rugby International at Cardiff To-day—Scottish Halves Changed.

It is shocking bad luck on Scotland having to change their half-backs at the last moment for their Rugby International with Wales at Cardiff to-day.

T. C. Bowie being injured, E. Milroy drops out, and A. S. Hamilton and A. T. Sloan are the halves. The inclusion of Sloan, to the exclusion of Fahmy, seems to have made them chatter amazingly up north.

Wales have made changes behind the scrum from the team that lost to England through the inefficiency of their scrum half, Lloyd and Clem Lewis as halves, but I. T. Davies and J. Wether come in for the scrum half, and the Welsh half-backs are the same. The forwards, of course, are the same. If they play to good effect at Twickenham they will make the Scotsmen sit up proper.

Both sides have an honest, hard-working lot of forwards, and if the opposition want to play a little rough, have a few to accommodate them. The Welsh half-backs are a question; they have a difficult job.

FINE SPORT AT SANDOWN PARK.

Lilaline Wins Grand Prize from General's Pride—Two Jockeys Injured.

With bright weather and plenty of runners the opening stage of the Sandown meeting provided a very enjoyable afternoon's sport for a large crowd.

Two outsiders managed to score during the day, but the results in the other races were more in accordance with general anticipations.

Sir C. Asheton-Smith's colours were expected to figure prominently, but of Red Daniel, George B. and Wild Aster only the last-named managed to win. In the absence of Red Daniel and George B. the winner was the only one of the three who was in the race.

Red Daniel was a favourite for a long time for the Sandown Grand Prize, but there was such a demand for Lilaline that the race was so-called at the Sandown meeting. Red Daniel and George B. were both in the race, and although General's Pride ran well he could not get on terms with Lilaline, who was considerably a length.

There were a couple of nasty spills in the Farnham hurdle race, and both J. Ryan and E. Pigott were injured. Ryan was carried back on an ambulance after Wandering Monkey had fallen at the last fence, and Pigott was dragged along by a stirrup leather when Kirkibloom came down after going half a mile. Kirkibloom was an odd one, but he was a good one.

There was another spill in the Stanley Handicap, in which the colours, brought off a 100 to 8 chance on Farnham, Ally Sloper, who was the first to come to grief, and although Heathstone made a bold show he failed to concede 9th to Mr. McMahon's horse.

Bossy Jinn, with C. Deller in the saddle, ran away with the February Hurdle, and Blockade Runner followed up his Newbury victory by scoring very easily from Kenia in the Mole Steeplechase.
